

In addition the research team conducted semi-structured interviews with project participants, teams, artists and stakeholders.

These mixed methodological tools enabled broad data generation that included both measurements of change around the key identified areas, and exploration of the meaning inherent within those experiences from differing perspectives.

The findings from this process encompass both measurement of changes and perceptions of value and whilst they go some way towards demonstrating the benefits of arts engagement, they also highlight areas for further research and development.

References

1. Arts Council England, (2005) Arts, Health and Well being: A strategy for Partnership. Arts and Health Strategy document
2. Coates, E (Ed). (2005) Creative Arts and Humanities in Healthcare: Swallows to other continents. A strategic paper prepared by a collaborative inquiry group
3. Cooperrider, D.L. et. al. (Eds) (2001) Lessons from the Field: Applying Appreciative Inquiry, Thin Book Publishing
4. Department of Health (2004) Choosing Health: making healthy choices easier. DH: London
5. Kilroy A.J., Garner C., Parkinson C., Kagan C., Senior P., (2007) Towards Transformation: Exploring the Impact of Creativity, Culture and the Arts on Health and Well-being. A consultation document for Critical Friends Conference, Lowry Gallery, Salford
6. Ryff C.D., Singer, B.H., Love, G.D., (2004) Positive health: connecting well being with biology. The Royal Society, London, 359, 1383-1394

Amanda Kilroy, Charlotte Garner, Clive Parkinson, Carolyn Kagan & Peter Senior

Published by Arts for Health at Manchester Metropolitan University, January 2008
Copyright © Arts for Health
All rights reserved

No part of this work may be reproduced by any means, or transmitted, or translated into a machine language without the written permission of Arts for Health at Manchester Metropolitan University, unless under the terms of the Copy right Licensing Agreement, or for use in education, or for dissemination within an organisation in which case the work must be reproduced in its entirety with acknowledgement of Arts for Health at Manchester Metropolitan University.

For information contact the publishers at the address below.

ISBN 1 900756 48 X

Photographs by Projects and Research Team

Arts for Health
Manchester Metropolitan University
Elizabeth Gaskell Campus
Hathersage Road
Manchester
M13 0JA
Telephone 0161 247 1094
Email: artsforhealth@mmu.ac.uk www.artsforhealth.org

